PARTIES

6. Plaintiff, Joy Ponder (herein “Ponder”), is a female citizen of the State of North Carolina, a resident of Buncombe County and at all times relevant to this complaint, an employee of the Defendant, City of Asheville.

7. Plaintiff is an “employee” as that term is defined in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e.

8. Defendant, City of Asheville (herein “City”) is a North Carolina municipality located in Buncombe County. The City operates the Asheville Fire Department (herein “Department” or “AFD”) as a division of the City.

9. Defendant is an “employer” as that term is defined in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e

FACTS

10. Prior to her medical retirement on June 1, 2020, Joy Ponder was a career employee of the City of Asheville Fire Department.

11. Ponder had been an employee of the Asheville Fire Department since 1998.

12. During Ponder’s 21-year career with the Asheville Fire Department, Ponder has held, successively, the positions of Health and Safety Officer, Firefighter, Senior Firefighter, Lieutenant, Captain, and Battalion Chief.

13. On August 31, 2014 Ponder was promoted to the position of Division Chief for the Department's A-Shift.

14. At no time in her 21-year career with the Asheville Fire Department did Ponder receive disciplinary action of any kind.

15. With the exception of the false and discriminatory letter complained of in paragraph nos. 105 -110 below, at no time in her 21-year career with the Asheville Fire Department had Ponder been given any documentation of unsatisfactory job performance from any supervisor.

16. Throughout her 21-year career with the Asheville Fire Department, Ponder's Job Performance evaluations were consistently Outstanding or Exemplary, and she routinely met and exceeded expectations set forth in such Job Performance evaluations by the City of Asheville.

17. In 2017, Chief Ponder was named as AFD's Most Outstanding Employee.

18. On Wednesday, June 12, 2019 Ponder was asked by Asheville Fire Department Chief Scott Burnette to meet with him and Deputy Chief Budzinski privately.

19. At that meeting, Ponder was told that she was being involuntarily transferred out of the position of the Division Chief in charge of A-Shift.

20. The Division Chief position, which Ponder had held for the past 5 years, is a "line" or operational position overseeing Fire Suppression activities.

21. In that position, Ponder supervised the daily operations of all 12 Fire Stations across the City, with approximately 75 firefighters under her overall supervision.

22. In that position, three Battalion Chiefs reported directly to Ponder.

23. A Division Chief is the highest-ranking officer directly responsible for fire suppression in the Asheville Fire Department.

24. Ponder was the first female in the history of the Asheville Fire Department to hold the position of Division Chief.

25. To date, Ponder remains the only female Division Chief to have served in the Asheville Fire Department in a fire suppression role.

26. At the time of her transfer, Ponder was told she was being transferred to a purely administrative position within the Chief's Office where she would work 9-5, Monday – Friday, and that she would be responsible for preparing the “Strategic Plan” for the Department.

27. Ponder was not told what resources she would have to complete the plan nor the time frame in which it was to be completed.

28. In her new position, Ponder did not supervise any employees nor have any supervisory authority in general – all of Ponder's supervisory and operational responsibilities as a Division Chief were removed from her.

29. Ponder was transferred to a “desk” position, and removed from a “line” or “operational” position involved in the management and supervision of fire suppression operations and other emergency operations such as management of fires, rescues, hazmat, emergency medical, and other emergency related events.

30. In her new position, Ponder was told she would be under Chief Burnette's "close supervision". This had not been the case while she served as the Division Chief of A-Shift. In that position, and consistent with the specifications of a Division Chief position, Ponder exercised a high level of job related autonomy. That autonomy was removed from her as a result of the transfer.

31. Prior to the transfer, Ponder was not given a meaningful opportunity to agree or disagree with this transfer or its timing.

32. Ponder was told by Chief Burnette that how she "handled" this transfer and how she "presented" it to the rest of the Department would determine her "future with the Department."

33. Ponder was instructed to tell all Departmental personnel, if asked, that she had agreed to the transfer, which was not true. Ponder did not agree with this transfer.

34. Following the meeting with Ponder where she was informed of this transfer, Deputy Chief Budzinski unilaterally announced at the next staff meeting that Ponder had "graciously volunteered" to be reassigned to days and lead the development of the Strategic Plan.

35. Chief Budzinski's statement was untrue and was known to be untrue by Budzinski at the time he made it to the AFD staff.

36. This transfer was done without any prior notice or discussion with Ponder about the transfer, the reason for the transfer, the need for the transfer or the adverse effects of this transfer on Ponder's professional and personal life.

37. After having served on a shift schedule for the majority of her career in the Asheville Fire Department, all of Ponder's personal life was structured around such a schedule.

38. Ponder was told the transfer was to be effective June 17th, which gave her no time to plan or make any necessary adjustments in her schedule and routine for either herself or her family.

39. The position of Division Chief is a senior level position within the Asheville Fire Department. Shift Division Chiefs, such as Ponder, work in fire suppression to oversee all the fire stations in the city, including but not limited to emergency scene work, personnel issues, training and safety, and public outreach and education.

40. The position into which Ponder was transferred had no connection to emergency scene work or supervision.

41. In her new position, Ponder did not exercise command authority over any Shift within the Department or over any recognized Division of the Department as is usual and customary for the position of Division Chief.

42. The position into which Ponder was transferred had none of the characteristics, duties, responsibilities or requirements of a Division Chief position in fire suppression, nor was it anything that she had specialized training or experience in.

43. Ponder had advanced experience and training in fire suppression activities. She was the first female member of the AFD to complete the National Fire Academy's Executive Fire Officer Program (4 Years), and the first AFD member to complete the International Association of Fire Chief's Fire Service Executive Development Institute (2 years).

44. Ponder had been recognized and chosen for the above programs due to her strong leaderships skills and regional reputation for excellence.

45. At the time of Ponder's transfer, there was no open Division Chief Position, as shown on the Department's organizational chart, into which she was transferred.

46. Ponder's A-Shift position had to be filled initially by someone moved up from a lower rank and operating "out-of-class", this change caused the Asheville Fire Department to incur additional costs, including, but not limited to, otherwise unnecessary overtime pay.

47. Prior to this act by Chief Burnette, an auditor reviewing the AFD payroll practices had recommended a reduction in out-of-class pay assignments.

48. Ponder's new position did not appear as a position on the Department's organizational chart.

49. To the extent the City alleges that Ponder's transfer created a new Division Chief position within the Department, no such new Division Chief position was in fact created nor was or had any such new position been approved by the City's Human Resource Office or the Office of the City Manager or funded in the budget.

50. In terms of Ponder's purported new job duties, the preparation of a Strategic Plan for the Department, it was and is the usual and customary practice of the Department to solicit interest for special assignments like this and to choose from among the interested candidates.

51. In the case of the preparation of the new Strategic Plan assigned to Ponder upon her transfer, another qualified employee had previously volunteered for this position and thus there was no need to assign Ponder to this position.

52. Additionally, several "administrative Chiefs" were already on the day shift and could have managed the project at no additional cost.

53. Ponder's assignment to this duty was not consistent with the normal policies and previous practices of the Department as those related to the assignment of an employee to such administrative duties.

54. As stated above, Ponder was transferred from a Shift position to a Day position.

55. Except in connection with disciplinary action, it is not the customary practice or policy of the Asheville Fire Department to transfer an officer off Shift work to Days without the consent of the officer.

56. In many cases, there is a pay supplement offered with the transfer to the Day shift to encourage an officer or officers to agree to the schedule change. This was not done in the case of Ponder.

57. Ponder's transfer by Chief Burnette followed none of the normal previous practices and policies of the Department in such matters.

58. Ponder was replaced in the A-Shift position from which she was involuntarily transferred by a male officer with less experience than Ponder.

59. This involuntary and adverse transfer was the most recent and the culmination of a series of harassing, hostile and discriminatory acts that had been directed at Ponder by Chief Burnette and other male members of the senior management of the Asheville Fire Department.

60. Ponder had previously been denied the right to wear her Asheville Fire Department Uniform when testifying on a firefighter health and wellness issue before a committee of the North Carolina General Assembly.

61. This right and privilege had previously been routinely allowed to male officers of the Department, and was only changed only after Ponder became a Division Chief.

62. During 2017 and 2018 all front line fire suppression Staff vehicles were to be replaced with new pick-up trucks. The goal was to remove exposure to possible carcinogens from firefighter gear that might be transmitted throughout an SUV type vehicle where the equipment is kept inside the passenger compartment area following its use on a fire site.

63. Ponder's vehicle was the only front line fire suppression vehicle that was not replaced. All male co-workers who had assigned vehicles received the new pick-up style vehicles.

64. Although additional new pick-up style vehicles were available to replace Ponder's staff vehicle, these were assigned to other male, non-front line and/or non-fire suppression officers in positions with much less potential carcinogen exposure.

65. In 2017 Ponder had been diagnosed with Breast Cancer and had undergone extensive treatment for her condition. Defendant, including Chief Burnette, were well aware of Ponder's status as a cancer patient and survivor.

66. Despite this, as set out above, Defendant did not assign a safer SUV-style vehicle to Ponder for her use.

67. In 2018, Ponder's desk was needlessly taken from her and was replaced by an older, less desirable desk that had another male employee's name on it. The more desirable desk was reassigned to a male officer of lower seniority.

68. Ponder helped develop curriculum with City Human Resource personnel for the Department's "Chief Academy" Program.

69. Having assisted in the development of the Program, Ponder then enrolled in and completed the initial two courses in the program. However, after predominantly male Asheville Fire Department staff redesigned the program,

Ponder attempted to re-enter the program and was told that her spot had been given away to a male employee.

70. Ponder attended courses anyway and remained on the roster. Ponder completed the required courses but was not issued a certificate of completion. Ponder was told that she was not registered and the City had not paid her tuition.

71. Successful completion of this course is required for future promotional advancement within the Asheville Fire Department.

72. Prior to her promotion to the Division Chief position, Ponder was denied the opportunity for an “out-of-class” assignment opportunity up to an acting Division Chief position, which was given to a male, Chris Budzinski, who had less seniority and who, at that time, was ranked lower on the promotional list than Ponder.

73. Budzinski was later promoted to Deputy Chief from this acting Division Chief position by Chief Burnette. Such promotion would not have been likely without the out-of-class assignment to an acting Division Chief position.

74. In 2019, Ponder was stripped without justification of her duties involving the Live Fire Portion of the AFD’s Lieutenant Testing Process, which for several years, along with Division Chief Mike Clark, Ponder had successfully organized, set up and served as the Incident Commander.

75. Ponder’s Lieutenant Testing duties were given to a less senior, lower ranking male officer.

76. Ponder had similarly been stripped without justification of her role in Health and Safety matters within the Department, despite the fact that she is recognized within Department and regionally as an experienced leader in these areas.

77. These Health and Safety duties were subsequently re-assigned to a male employee with less experience in these issues than Ponder.

78. In 2019, Ponder and AFD Training Officer Chris Johnson worked with Dr. Evelyn Chiang and the University of North Carolina Asheville to conduct a research study involving PTSD among firefighters. This study was completed on a voluntary basis with firefighters at AFD. This peer reviewed research study was published in 2020 in the Journal of Trauma and Loss.

79. Ponder was repeatedly questioned and aggressively challenged in regards to the 2020 study by Chief Burnette and others while officer, Chris Johnson, the male co-author who had participated equally, was never questioned or challenged concerning the Study.

80. In 2016, Ponder had collaborated with Dr. Evelyn Chiang to conduct a research study with AFD volunteers which was published in the peer reviewed Journal of Occupational and Environmental Medicine.

81. Despite the fact that both of these studies were published in respected peer reviewed medical and occupational journals, Burnette refused to recognize, within the Department, the City or within the profession generally, Ponder's role in these important studies.

82. Burnette routinely sends out all-staff notifications of, and public congratulations to, male officers who engage in any such firefighter health and safety related efforts.

83. In addition to the above actions, Chief Burnette consistently treated Ponder in a personally demeaning, hostile and harassing manner.

84. Chief Burnette's behavior regularly included yelling at Ponder, forcing her into meetings either alone or with only Deputy Chief Budzinski present where he and/or Budzinski would berate her and attempt to intimidate her, and other attempts to intimidate or harass Ponder.

85. On one occasion, Burnette waited for Ponder in a darkened parking garage where he suddenly approached her and begin speaking harshly to her.

86. Another fire officer who happened to witness this event later expressed concern for her well-being due to this event.

87. Chief Burnette did not treat male employees in this same adverse fashion with the same intensity or frequency.

88. Following her involuntary transfer, Ponder took FMLA leave due to stress caused her by all of the adverse treatment set out above.

89. Following her return from FMLA, Ponder was fearful and afraid to leave her office area due to the unpredictable and irrational behavior of Chief Burnette toward her. Ponder would telephone other employees to meet her before making a trip to the copier or restroom in an attempt to avoid being confronted alone by Burnette.

90. Ponder was moved from a shared office in 2019 in which she had some sense of safety and security to a single office directly across the hall from Burnette and Budzinski when she returned from her FMLA leave in December 2019.

91. During 2019 Ponder filed two internal grievances with the City of Asheville Human Resources Department against Burnette and the Department due to these hostile and harassing actions.

92. In terms of responding to each of these grievances, the Defendant repeatedly failed to meet its own deadlines for processing the grievances.

93. In both cases the Defendant failed to provide any relief for Ponder, indicating that there was no evidence of hostile, adverse or inappropriate conduct by Burnette or others.

94. This was clearly not the case with regard to Ponder.

95. Because of the pending grievances and the continued hostile actions against her, upon her return to work from FMLA in late 2019, Ponder filed a request with City of Asheville Human Resources Department to be allowed to work anywhere in the city away from Brunette and Budzinski due to her continued concerns of harassment.

96. This request was summarily denied by the City and Ponder was required to continue to work in close physical proximity to and under the direct supervision of Burnette.

97. All of Ponder's meetings with Burnette continued to be conducted in private, often with little or no notice, with no transparency, and Ponder was never allowed to bring anyone with her, despite her repeated requests to do so.

98. Ponder experienced so much dread, stress and anxiety at the thought of going to work that she found it very difficult to return to work in late 2019 following her medical leave and found it very difficult to do work once she did return.

99. On October 20, 2019, Burnette disclosed Ponder's confidential Personnel information in an e-mail sent to all fire staff within the Asheville Fire Department. North Carolina State law protects the confidentiality of this information, and Burnette's action releasing it was in violation of North Carolina State law.

100. Upon information and belief, during 2019, one or more female employees of the Asheville Fire Department also filed grievances or voiced complaints concerning their treatment by Burnette and the Department as a whole under his leadership.

101. In 2019 the City assigned an outside investigator to review Ponder's, and possibly other complaints, filed against Burnette and the Department.

102. Upon information and belief, during this investigation, several female employees of the Department, and possibly male employees, reported the existence of hostile, harassing and other discriminatory conduct on the basis of sex within the Department.

103. The outside investigator assigned by the Defendant to perform this investigation was a male, retired Asheville Police Department Detective with apparently no experience in investigating workplace discrimination allegations.

104. Ponder was never given a report of the outcome of any such investigation and is not aware of any substantive actions taken by the Defendant as a result this investigation.

105. At no time either prior to or at the time of her involuntary transfer was Ponder given or shown a letter dated June 17, 2019 which purports to be a letter from Chief Burnette to Ponder alleging certain performance deficiencies on her part as a Division Chief.

106. This letter was first presented to Ponder as “evidence” at an Asheville Civil Service Board Hearing held on October 23, 2019.

107. None of the “Performance Observations” as set out in that letter nor any of the “goals” and “expectations” as described in that letter, had ever been presented to Ponder in any written format. This is despite the fact that such “observations,” “goals” and “expectations” purport to cover a two- year period.

108. The letter of June 17, 2019 contains no specific factual incidents or allegations concerning Ponder’s performance. Rather it is written in general, non-specific and vague terms. It utilizes a host of clichés and banalities.

109. The letter of June 17, 2019 is false as a matter of fact and completely inconsistent with the Corrective Action & Discipline Policy of the City of Asheville that mandates a process of progressive discipline when dealing with alleged performance issues.

110. This false letter is harmful to Ponder's professional standing and reputation and remains a part of Ponder's official personnel file.

111. As to the state law claims pled herein, Defendant has waived immunity to civil suit and damages in this matter in that it has purchased or otherwise provided for liability insurance.
